Dear Hiring Manager

As a final year student majoring in Information System at University of Indonesia, I am enthusiastically seeking an internship for summer 2016. I found out there is Internship opportunities at Summarecon , which I found so interesting.

Previously I had an opportunity to become Project Manager in HRRIS (Human Resource Recruitment Information System) Project at PT. Definite Maji Arsana. Since then, I know I have a keen interest in project management and system analytics. I am capable working with web framework such as Yii, Laravel and I am also comfortable working with object oriented programming.

During my studies at University of Indonesia, I have a good academic track record and I have been involved in some organizational activities, these experiences have allowed me to develop time management, interpersonal skills, critical thinking, and other soft skills. Hopefully with both technical and soft skills, I may have a good start to become a system analyst in the future.

I think that internship opportunities in Summarecon would be a great place to hone my skills and experience in system analytics or project management, since I have heard so many good reviews about the company itself. It would be great if there is intern position in system analyst or project/product management. Otherwise its not problem if I can apply become Website / Application Development because in my mind to become a good system analyst you must have well experienced in programming. Hope I can learn as much as possible while making a real contribution for the team and will strive for excellence in every task given and / or taken.

I look forward to hearing more from you. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Yohanes
